ABSTRACT

Based on prescribed social studies content and objectives for twelfth-grade Alberta, Canada students, the specifications described in this document are intended to serve two purposes: (1) to identify specific course content and objectives that should be considered in evaluating student progress and achievement in Social Studies 30; and (2) to delineate the specific content and objectives for which test items for the Diploma Examination in Social Studies 30 may be developed. The second portion of the document describes the curriculum specifications for the Social Studies 30 diploma examination in two topics: political and economic systems, and cooperation and conflict among states. Curriculum objectives relating to attitudes and certain participation skills are excluded from the weighting system for provincial examinations due to the inappropriateness of attitude testing and/or the difficulties associated with test construction and administration. This portion specifies the content and objectives eligible for classroom testing and outlines a recommended weighting system for consideration by teachers, administrators and developers. The third portion of the document indicates the weighting system that will be used in developing the diploma examination. Two tables are included: (1) "Relative Emphasis of Course Objectives and Content for Social Studies 30"; and (2) "Weightings for Social Studies 30 Provincial Diploma Examination." (TRS)

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

These Curriculum Specifications for Social Studies 30 were revised from earlier editions developed since 1981. The 1985 edition was prepared by the following committee, operating under the direction of the Curriculum Branch, Alberta Education:

C. Blue, Provost School District

J. Brackenbury, Alberta Education, CHAIRMAN

M. Carby, Edmonton Roman Catholic School District

B. Jonas, Alberta Education

P. McCormick, University of Lethbridge

G. Oberg, County of Flagstaff

D. Reimche, Camrose School District

C. Ross, Grande Prairie School District

Thanks are also extended to those teachers who provided feedback to earlier drafts of this document, and to the Regional Office Social Studies consultants who gathered the feedback.

I. RATIONALE

The Social Studies 30 curriculum specifications are based on the prescribed content and objectives of the 1981 Alberta Social Studies Curriculum for Grade 12. These specifications are intended to serve two significant purposes:

1. To identify specific course content and objectives, and relative weightings, that should be considered in the evaluation of student progress and achievement in Social Studies 30. In seeking to achieve this, the specifications include more extensive detail than is contained in the social studies curriculum guide.

2. To delineate the specific content and objectives from which test items for the Diploma Examination in Social Studies 30 may be developed.

Section II of this document describes the curriculum specifications and recommended weightings of specifications for the Social Studies 30 diploma examination. Curriculum objectives relating to "attitudes" and certain "participation skills" are excluded from the weighting system for provincial examinations because of the inappropriateness of attitude testing for such examinations or because of difficulties associated with test construction and administration on a provincial scale.

In other words, Section II (Curriculum Specifications) specifies the content and objectives that are eligible for classroom testing, and outlines a recommended weighting system for consideration by teachers, other school authorities and test developers. Section III indicates the weighting system that will be used by the Student Evaluation Branch of Alberta Education in developing the diploma examination.

II. DESCRIPTION OF CURRICULUM SPECIFICATIONS FOR SOCIAL STUDIES 30

Recommended Emphasis of Social Studies 30 Objectives and Content for General Instructional and Classroom-Testing Purposes

Value Objectives	Value objectives are allotted a weighting of 20%. Weightings for the sub-categories of value objectives are: understanding values - 5%, value competencies - 5%, and attitudes - 10% (see table 1).
Knowledge Objectives	Knowledge objectives are allotted a weighting of 40%, distributed evenly between the two prescribed curriculum topics (see table 1). The knowledge objectives are structured around the prescribed concepts for Grade 12 topics. These concepts have been expanded somewhat to ensure that both the topic descriptions and the prescribed questions to guide inquiry are described in specific terms.
Skill Objectives	Skill objectives are allotted a weighting of 40%, with 30% of that allocated to sub-categories of inquiry and participation skills as contained in the 1981 Alberta Social Studies Curriculum guide. The remaining 10% is allocated to the inquiry process as an integrated set of skill areas (see table 1).

TOPIC A - POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC SYSTEMS

Value Objectives

I. Develop Understanding of Values

A. Identify the extent to which different elements of the values of individualism and collectivism, as well as the meanings given to each, are reflected in major political and economic systems. These elements include the competing values* of:

1. Freedom, equality
2. Personal material welfare, social welfare
3. Self-reliance, service
4. Personal liberty, citizenship
5. Self-advancement, cooperativeness
6. Self-fulfillment, empathy

*(It should be noted that the curriculum intent is to encourage students to examine issues from different value perspectives. This is not intended to promote "either/or, polar-opposite" choices. For example, in some cases, pursuing empathy might promote self-fulfillment.)

II. Develop Competencies

A. In decision-making, by examining the desirability and feasibility of modifying Canada's political and economic systems according to a personal value position.

B. In moral reasoning, by testing one's value positions for consistency in a number of situations (New Cases Test and Subsumption Test).

III. Develop Attitudes

(NOTE: Attitudes will not be tested in the Diploma Examination.)

A. Of respect for evidence, by demonstrating a willingness to regard one's own position as tentative and testable.

SKILL OBJECTIVES

	TOPIC APPLICATIONS
I. Inquiry Skills (The following inquiry skill objectives will be tested through either topic applications, as listed to the right, or applications similar to Social Studies 30 content.)
A. Skill Area One. Identify and focus on the issue by:
Paraphrasing the issue from different sources, or expressing opinions	Focus on the issue by identifying the extent to which individual welfare and collective good appear to be emphasized in a variety of economic and political systems.
B. Skill Area Two. Formulate research questions by:
Formulating appropriate research questions to guide information gathering	Formulate research questions designed to identify and differentiate the central characteristics of major political and economic systems.
C. Skill Area Three. Gather and organize data by:
1. Reading and interpreting contemporary and historical print materials, maps, graphs, tables, charts, and timelines	Read and interpret historical and contemporary documents relating to political and economic systems and their value bases.
2. Surveying	Collect, record and interpret survey data designed to identify political and economic perspectives.
D. Skill Area Four. Analyze and evaluate data by:
1. Categorizing data	Determine symbolism used and the points of view expressed in political cartoons and writings.
2. Comparing and contrasting data	Compare and contrast ideas expressed by various authors about political and economic systems.
3. Explaining discrepancies in viewpoints, positions and arguments
4. Evaluating bias and emotionalism, subjectivity and objectivity
5. Inferring reasons for varying perspectives
6. Discriminating relevant from irrelevant data

	TOPIC APPLICATIONS
E. Skill Area Five. Synthesize data by:
1. Developing concepts	Develop definitions of individualism and collectivism, supported by critical reference to the political and economic systems studied.
2. Formulating generalizations	Develop a generalization about key variables that differentiate political and economic systems.
3. Relating causes and effects
4. Summarizing information
F. Skill Area Six. Resolve the issue by:
1. Formulating alternative solutions	State in an essay conclusions reached about political and economic systems studied.
2. Analyzing values underlying each alternative
3. Predicting the consequences of each alternative
4. Evaluating alternatives and making a policy decision based on:
- adequacy of supporting evidence
- logical consistency of arguments
- priority of personal values
- priority of social values
G. Skill Area Seven. Apply the decision by:
Considering the feasibility and desirability of applying the decision in some form of action	Consider the desirability and feasibility of modifying Canada's political and economic systems.
H. Skill Area Eight. Evaluate the decision, the process and the action by:
1. Judging the worthwhileness of the consequences of the decision	Evaluate the decision by considering whether the evidence on a variety of political and economic systems has had any effect on one's decision.
2. Examining the appropriateness of the action
3. Assessing the suitability of the process to the issue and resources

II. Participation Skills

TOPIC APPLICATIONS

(NOTE: Certain participation skills will not be tested in the Diploma Examination.)

A. Skill Area One. Communicate effectively by:

1. Expressing ideas clearly and succinctly
2. Supporting ideas logically
3. Adapting communication on the basis of:
   - size of audience (e.g., individual, small group, class or community)
   - age of audience
   - purpose of message (e.g., formal or informal)

In an oral presentation, communicate effectively the results of a political survey activity.

B. Skill Area Two. Interpret ideas of feelings of self and others by:

1. Listening to the expression of ideas and feelings of others
2. Understanding and empathizing with the dilemmas and decisions of others
3. Interpreting feelings from verbal and non-verbal cues

Interpret the ideas and feelings of self and others by role-playing what it might be like to be citizens in various political and economic systems.

C. Skill Area Three. Participate in group work and decision-making by:

1. Choosing an appropriate model for decision-making in class and small group situations (e.g., consensus, majority rule, authority) and applying appropriate rules for procedure
2. Applying alternate roles as leader or follower in a group
3. Preparing a position in understandable and persuasive terms
4. Organizing activities to promote group goals
5. Negotiating (including bargaining, trading, confronting, compromising) to influence others to take a certain position, or to build consensus
6. Providing support in furthering group goals

Participate in group decision-making by determining the desirability and feasibility of modifying Canada's political and economic systems.

D. Skill Area Four. Contribute to a "sense of community" by:

1. Demonstrating a sense of sharing of group goals and aspirations
2. Assisting in group projects, both in and outside the classroom, to help others achieve a sense of belonging and mutual trust

Contribute to a "sense of community" by sharing with class members one's thoughts and feelings about the impact of the unit on one's value position.

TOPIC B - COOPERATION AND CONFLICT AMONG STATES

VALUE OBJECTIVES

I. Develop Understanding of Values

A. Identify elements of the values of nationalism and internationalism as reflected in the affairs of nation states. These elements include the competing values* of:

1. National independence, welfare of mankind
2. National security, collective security
3. National prosperity, global prosperity
4. National prestige, international equity
5. National unity, international fellowship
6. National culture, cultural achievements of mankind

*(It should be noted that the curriculum intent is to encourage students to examine issues from different value perspectives. This is not intended to promote "either/or, polar opposite" choices. For example, in some cases, national security could be promoted through the pursuit of collective security.)

II. Develop Competencies

A. In value analysis, by identifying the consequences (i.e., probable results) of actions intended to advance nationalism and internationalism.

B. In moral reasoning, by distinguishing between different types of arguments given in defence of nationalism and internationalism (e.g., moral, prudential, economic, political, religious).

In moral reasoning, by assessing the role of moral considerations in international relationships.

III. Develop Attitudes

(NOTE: Attitudes will not be tested in the Diploma Examination.)

A. Of self-worth, by accepting personal responsibility in developing a group solution to a specific current issue in international politics.

B. Of appreciation for the efforts of nations to find constructive ways of resolving international differences.

KNOWLEDGE OBJECTIVES CONCEPT	DESCRIPTIVE CONTENT (AND EXAMPLES)
	A wide variety of international relationships should be investigated. Examples of both cooperation and conflict should be analyzed; international relations both inside and outside of formal organizations should be investigated; and Canada's role in these relationships during the 20th century should be given attention. (Please note that examples, where given, are for illustrative purposes only. They are not intended as a statement of minimal or core content.)
I. Sovereignty and Territoriality	Rise of the state system in Europe and growing strength of nationalism in Europe before World War I Nationalism and anti-colonialism in Africa and Asia (e.g., Vietnam)
II. Balance of Power
A. Types of Balance of Power	Simple balance between equals (e.g., Triple Alliance and Triple Entente; NATO and Warsaw Pact) Bipolar (e.g., nuclear arms race between U.S.A. and U.S.S.R.) Regional (e.g., NORAD) Spheres of influence (U.S.A. in the Caribbean, China in Southeast Asia, the U.S.S.R. in Eastern Europe)
B. Motivation for Balance of Power	Security (e.g., motives of Britain in 1904 Entente Cordiale and of U.S.S.R. in 1939 Nazi-Soviet Pact) Stability (e.g., Camp David Agreement, 1978)
C. Techniques of Balance of Power	Containment (e.g., Entente Cordiale, 1904; Truman Doctrine, 1947; U.S. Intervention in Southeast Asia, 1960s) Alliances (e.g., Triple Alliance and Triple Entente; Canada in NATO) Appeasement (e.g., Munich crisis, 1938) Brinkmanship (e.g., Sarajevo, 1914; Cuban missile crisis, 1962) Isolationism (e.g., British "Splendid Isolation" prior to 1905; U.S.A.'s refusal to join League of Nations)

KNOWLEDGE OBJECTIVES CONCEPT	DESCRIPTIVE CONTENT (AND EXAMPLES)
III. Detente and Co-existence	Military (e.g., Khrushchev 1956 statement on peaceful co-existence; Partial Test Ban Treaty, 1963; SALT TALKS, 1972, 1979)
	Political and economic (e.g., Helsinki Accords, 1975)
	Diplomatic (e.g., U.S.A. support for admission to the UN of the People's Republic of China, 1971)
IV. Imperialism
A. Forms of Imperialism	Military, political, economic, ideological/cultural motives as reflected in the 20th century
	The "New Imperialism": Colonialism, pre-World War I (e.g., "white man's burden"; scramble for colonies)
	Axis expansion, pre-World War II (e.g., Manchuria, 1931; Ethiopia, 1935; Anschluss, 1938)
	Spheres of influence, post-World War II (e.g., U.S.S.R. in Central Europe; U.S.A. in Central America and Caribbean)
B. Consequences of Imperialism	International tensions (e.g., leading to World Wars I and II)
	Liberation movements (e.g., Indo-China)
	Third World Alignments against the "old order" (e.g., Third World voting blocs at the UN)
	Post-colonial associations (e.g., Commonwealth)
V. Conflict
A. Multiple Causes of Conflict	Nationalism, militarism, economic, ideological, and religious causes reflected in:
	Arms race (e.g., German/British military build-up pre-World War I; NATO and Warsaw Pact deployment of nuclear missiles in Europe)
	Alliance system (e.g., Triple Alliance and Triple Entente)
	Trade rivalries (e.g., pre-World War I Britain and Germany)
	Secret diplomacy (e.g. pre-World War I, Nazi-Soviet Pact, 1939)
	Annexation (e.g., Nazi seizure of Czechoslovakia, 1939)
	Traditional antagonisms (e.g., France-Germany before World War I; Arab-Israeli)
	Violation of treaties (e.g., German invasion of Belgium, 1914)
	Struggle for resources (e.g., Britain-Germany in East Africa pre-World War I; Japanese expansion in the Pacific pre-World War II)
	Perceptions of citizens and leaders (e.g., pre-World War I; Nazi notions of racial superiority)
	Aggression (e.g., Nazi Germany, Japan, and Italy in the late 1930's)

KNOWLEDGE OBJECTIVES

CONCEPT	DESCRIPTIVE CONTENT (AND EXAMPLES)
V. Conflict (cont.)
B. Nature of Conflict	Crisis: escalation and de-escalation in major 20th century conflicts (e.g., World War I, World War II, Vietnam)
	War: Limited War in scope and scale (e.g., Korea, Vietnam) Total war in scope and scale (e.g., World Wars I and II)
	Conventional, limited nuclear, total nuclear war
	Guerilla war (e.g., Vietnam)
	International terrorism (e.g., P.L.O.)
	Chemical-biological war (e.g., World War I, Vietnam)
	Cold War: tensions between East and West since 1945
C. Consequences of Conflict	Treaties/settlements (e.g. Versailles, 1919)
	Territorial changes (e.g., successor states after World War I; Six Day War, 1967; African and Asian independence)
	Human and material losses (e.g., military and civilian casualties, refugees, psychological effects)
	New economic and political relations (e.g., post-World War I decline of European influence; post-World War II rise of superpowers)
	New social roles and attitudes (e.g., increased economic and political participation of women during and post-World Wars I and II; expectations for the enhanced role of government.)
VI. Cooperation
A. Motives for Cooperation	- Peace and Stability
	International exchanges (e.g., Olympics)
	International organizations and agencies (e.g., League of Nations, United Nations)
	Regional security arrangements (e.g., NATO)
	- Economic Assistance
	Reconstruction (e.g., Marshall Plan, Comecon)
	Humanitarian concerns (e.g., W.H.O.)

KNOWLEDGE OBJECTIVES CONCEPT	DESCRIPTIVE CONTENT (AND EXAMPLES)
VI. Cooperation (cont.) B. Nature of Cooperation	- Bilateral: agreements, summit conferences, alliances, settlements Arms limitation (e.g., SALT TALKS) Trade (e.g., Canada - U.S.A. Auto Pact) Military (e.g., NORAD) - Multilateral: agreements, summit conferences, alliances, settlements Collective security (e.g., League of Nations; United Nations) Peace settlements (e.g., Treaty of Versailles) Disarmament (e.g., Hague Conference, 1907; Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty, 1968) Economic (e.g., GATT, OPEC) Military (e.g., NATO, Warsaw Pact) Universal human rights (e.g., Geneva Conventions; UN Declaration of Human Rights) Popular movements (e.g., Amnesty International; International Peace Movements)
VII. Internationalism and Supranationalism	- Consequences of Internationalism Survival of the nation state (e.g., increase in number of sovereign states) Peace and stability (e.g., UN role in Suez crisis, 1956) Economic benefits (e.g., GATT, IMF; World Bank) Increased international concern for human rights (e.g., Amnesty International; Helsinki Accords, 1975; sanctions against South Africa) - Consequences of Supranationalism Transfer of sovereignty from the state to a supranational organization (e.g., European Parliament, 1958 to present) Creation of a more integrated human community (e.g., free movement of labour within EEC)

I. Inquiry Skills

(The following inquiry skill objectives will be tested through either topic applications, as listed to the right, or applications similar to Social Studies 30 content.)

TOPIC APPLICATIONS

A. Skill Area One. Identify and focus on the issue by:

1. Identifying the elements of the social issue
2. Paraphrasing the issue from different sources, or expressions of opinion

Focus on the issue by examining various examples of cooperation and conflict and relating them to goals of nationalism and internationalism in the 20th century.

B. Skill Area Two. Formulate research questions by:

1. Formulating appropriate research questions to guide information gathering
2. Selecting appropriate techniques and resources for research

Formulate research questions to guide in gathering appropriate data for investigating the relationship between nationalism and internationalism in the 20th century.

C. Skill Area Three. Gather and organize data by:

Reading and interpreting contemporary and historical print materials, maps, graphs, tables, charts, and timelines

Gather and organize data by reading and interpreting historical materials (primary and secondary) from a variety of sources and formats.

Record in outline form, the main supporting ideas in each data source examined.

D. Skill Area Four. Analyze and evaluate data by:

1. Categorizing data
2. Comparing and contrasting data
3. Explaining discrepancies in viewpoints, positions and arguments
4. Evaluating bias and emotionalism, subjectivity and objectivity
5. Inferring reasons for varying perspectives
6. Discriminating relevant from irrelevant data

Analyze and evaluate data by assessing the validity of each data source examined in terms of bias and fallacious arguments.

	TOPIC APPLICATIONS
E. Skill Area Five. Synthesize data by:
1. Developing concepts	Formulate conclusions about the respective importance of nationalism and internationalism in various episodes in the 20th century.
2. Formulating generalizations
3. Relating causes and effects	Formulate generalizations about the relationships between nationalism and internationalism
